Short description: The aim of the event was as follows.

As part of the E.U.R.O.P.E project, we conducted workshops for prisoners in Poland, Greece and Hungary. The key element of the project was cooperation with prisoners and all those endangered with exclusion. The workshops were held in all three countries and included 374 prisoners. Classes were conducted by 28 people, volunteers and activists. During classes, the educators used active methods, engaging participants and allowing them to use their skills, knowledge, and experience. Classes tackled all three thematic areas of the project: the problem of exclusion and discrimination, human rights and knowledge on the European Union, and occupational qualifications on the labor market.

The topics of the meetings were very diverse. We talked about stereotypes, prejudices, hate speech and marginalization. We provided basic knowledge about the European Union. We have become deeply involved in the issue of human rights. We used the time to create and develop interpersonal and communication skills. We took the workshop participants on a trip down to each other. We showed them how to sort through their simple thoughts with a simple drawing. We have tried to use new technologies and art to enrich and make these meetings more interesting. In order to conduct these activities, a group of volunteers created their own scripts. To maintain the same standard they used one outline to diversify and adapt to the participants. It should be emphasized that each group was different. It is impossible to compare these experiences. All workshops technics are included in final publication “You too can work with prisoners” available on project web page: www.europe-project.eu Publication includes following topics:

- Working with prisoners
 - o How to start?
 - o How to work?
 - o How to prepare good scenario?
- Class scenario building
- Kolb’s cycle
- Exemplary scenarios of working with prisoners in EUROPE project.
 - o Warm up exercises for participants to get to know each other
 - o Common goals and work rules
 - o Substantive exercises
 - o Summary and evaluation
- Inspirations
- Prison newspaper as a form of education
- The danger of words – definitions of most used concepts in anti-racist work

Second day of conference "Resocialization through the Art in discussions and practice" took place in the premises of the historic Jabłkowski Brothers Department House, where participants were greeted by Maciej Sopyło from the Young Journalists Association "POLIS". Rescheduled presentations of artists and programs executed with convicts included:

The "Girl from the Castle" by Eliza Proszczuk, a painter, art book artist and works in public space is a moving story about three young women convicted of serious crimes and imprisoned in a closed prison ("castle") in Warsaw's Grochów district. In the depths of his soul he can be like princesses from a fabulous castle, waiting for his prince.

"Waiting Room" by Eliza Proszczuk, Kamila Szejnoch in cooperation with Paulina Tumiel is about a room where families of condemned women wait to see. The interior was cramped and depressing, so the idea came to change. The participants were embedded, which had the dimension of their gesture towards visitors to relatives and loved ones. Women showed initiative and their abilities. The pictures showed how the waiting room before and after the metamorphosis. The first one by Marcin Góralski is based on convict postcards for children, often sick and disabled. The second one by Monika Skierś is to work on self-esteem through Make professional photo shoots for women.

In the next part of the conference the theatre group "Fallen Angels Raised" from the Prison in Strzelce Opolskie with the performance "History Found in the Cell" appeared. Also presentations of artists, installation and video programs in Greece, the concert of the music group "Saint and Friends" were also met with great interest.

At the end of the meeting the participants watched the presentation of the Dreams of Dreams of the Forum Theater, which addressed the issue of prevention of domestic violence. The Forum Theater differs from the traditional one, giving spectators the opportunity to "add" the continuation of the action or change it through interventions during the performance.
